

These boots were made for dancing too

By Mrs. Judy Lewis

20th Fighter Wing Public Affairs deputy

A first lieutenant here is continuing a life-long tradition when she drops her combat boots at the stage door and dons a specially-designed costume to sing and dance in "Rogers and Hammerstein's A Grand Night for Singing."

1st Lt. Robyn Turner, 609th Air Intelligence Squadron deputy chief, Arabian Peninsula section, is one of a cast of five in the revue at the Sumter Little Theater.

"Robyn is extremely talented and a valuable asset to the show," said Mr. Forrest Ray, the show's music director. "We are extremely fortunate to have her."

Turner, a soprano who calls Stow, Ohio, home, has been singing almost as long as she can remember. She began as a small child with her family in church. "My whole family sings," she said. "It's a hobby for us and a fun way to do something together."

She continued singing in college where she studied classically at the University of Akron, in Ohio. She sang in choir, at renaissance festivals and chamber ensembles. In addition, she sang in four operas in college, two of which included solo roles.

"[Robin] has such a wonderful voice and she fits right in. We are having a great time in rehearsal. I know the audience is going to really enjoy this," said Ms. Katy Dameron, revue director.

Lt. Turner is quick to point out the support and encouragement of her coworkers has made it all possible. "Everyone has been so understanding. I appreciate their flexibility," she said.

Although Lt. Turner will not be singing with her own family this time, her Air Force family plans to be there to support her and wish her well.

"Rogers and Hammerstein's A Grand Night for Singing" continues tonight through Sunday and Thursday through Sept. 19. Tickets are half-price for Shaw personnel and their families on Thursday.

For reservations and information, contact the box office at 775-1250.

Team Shaw encouraged to make new friends, keep old

By Airman 1st Class Susan Penning
Staff writer

Moving frequently is common among military families. This uprooting can mean adjusting to a new environment, meeting new people and making a whole new set of friends.

Some people choose to not make an effort to get out and socialize. As a result, they may have feelings of loneliness or not belonging.

It is imperative for military families, because they move from base to base, to go the extra mile to reach out to others and make friends, according to Ms. Patsy Johnson, Family Support Center flight chief.

The FSC has numerous programs in place to help build bridges connecting people who might not meet otherwise, she added.

Ms. Johnson said in addition to making new friends when you come to a new base, it's important to maintain the friendships you've built over the years. She encourages people to stay in touch via e-mail, letters or phone calls.

"Some of my closest friends live miles away," she said.

In addition to the FSC's emphasis on building and nurturing relationships, the Community Center also offers opportunities for networking.

chess club and various support groups here, said Mrs. Sherri Jacobs, Community Center event coordinator.

"Getting involved in community groups or clubs can help build lifelong friendships," she added.

For more information on networking opportunities at Shaw, call the FSC at 895-1252 or the Community Center at 895-3382.
